Text Chat Transcript for Nov 19, 2015 Webinar: Digital Badging in the Library Community

Maria Sunio (RCLS):We've used online badges in California Library Association's pilot project using Great Reading Adventure. I'm looking for ways to use them for staff training and rewards.

Eileen O'Shea:YALSA badges for learning: http://www.ala.org/yalsa/badges-learning

Eileen O'Shea:http://www.badgealliance.org

Larry Britt:great for learners w/o perm. housing

George Bergstrom:a dozen or morre, and no

Melissa:Indiana Lib Federation annual conference

Michael Burris:Not a chance.

Beatrice:40 can't remember them all

David Carter:about 15

Melissa:yesterday

Maria Sunio (RCLS):ditto what George said.

Lauren Dahlgren:Over 12 courses. Many of them Infopeople.

Jody:15+ and no, I can almost never remeber the names

Rebecka:Quite a few but yes, I can't remember the titles.

Michele:I use my calendar to keep records of my training. it doesn't work that well

Melissa:ha ha

Stacy Tomaszewski:So many!! Might remember a few...

Laura:a lot and they are written down in multiple documents

Patrick Milas:I have a list of the titles...

Leizel Case:A lot, but don't remember all

George Bergstrom:I have virtual certificates for some

George Bergstrom:physical for others

Maria Sunio (RCLS):Anyone know if LinkedIn has a place for storing/displaying badges?

George Bergstrom:I don't think linkedin can display badges

George Bergstrom:but they can display Coursera certificates

Larry Britt:But there's a way to share dig. backpack on Linkedin

David McHugh:LinkedIn says they're compliant with the open badging standard. Not sure exactly how to add them there though.

Maria Sunio (RCLS):Thanks, I didn't know about the Coursera certs. I've begun and not always finished some free Canva courses.

Eileen O'Shea:LinkedIn: http://openbadges.tumblr.com/post/55809369771/how-to-display-your-open-badges-on-your-linkedin

Maria Sunio (RCLS):Sorry, I meant Canvas courses, not Canva.

Melissa:Thanks Eileen

Eileen O'Shea:WordPress plugin: http://badgeos.org/

Laura:e-portfolios were a requirement for graduating with a MSLIS

Karisa Tashjian:Adult literacy work is very rewarding and we plan to start a digital badging program with our students

nesba: digital badges also gives/ shows a sense of belonging

Melissa:I gave them a few years ago for 12 different safety trainings

Michele:in the BiblioCommons catalog, we're using badges to track summer reading progress

Melissa:Actually I still do. But put them in a certificate

Lida Clouser:attendees of our community Spanish class - paper certificate

Melissa:Lida I put mine in a certificate too.

Brianna:We record trainings that staff take in their BambooHR record.

Melissa:I want to have them somewhere that you can see all your badges at once

Brianna:Yes

Shana:w

Melissa:great!

David Carter:We keep track in our online HR program too...

Larry Britt:We use Northstar Digital Literaracy Assessment - assesments offer certificates and badges

Brianna:www.bamboohr.com

Maria Sunio (RCLS):We used this site to make our SRP badges last summer: http://www.onlinebadgemaker.com/

Eileen O'Shea:Pixabay: https://pixabay.com

Stanley Strauss:PPT is also a great program for making templates.

Melissa:Stanley, that's what I used. Love ppt for designing graphics

David McHugh:The Noun Project (thenounproject.com) has great simple images, all under creative commons attribution licenses

Melissa:yes, I used those at one point

Stanley Strauss:Credly may be something the Friends would want to sponsor for the library.

Stanley Strauss:https://credly.com

David McHugh:You can issue badges for free via Credly too, just with fewer features

Rebecka:Have you recieved positive feedback from those that you've sent the badges to through credly?

Melissa:thanks David, good to knkow

Melissa:*know

Rebecka:That's fantastic, thank you.

Maria Sunio (RCLS):Thanks, David, for the Credly tip!

George Bergstrom:2 at most

Marie:Just me

Jeanne Fondrie:1 for staff, maybe more for patrons

David Carter:not sure?!

Maria Sunio (RCLS):County system: 1-3 to create, 5 to give to staff, many more to give to patrons.

Karisa Tashjian:Thinking of getting images from our Special Collections

Larry Britt:use google images as you explained for FB posts

Leizel Case:Creative commons

Melissa:I would create it myself

Jeanne Fondrie:Take my own pictures - not copyright issues!

Laura:We have graphic artists that would be in charge of this, but I'm fine searching for them too

Stanley Strauss:Creative Commons: http://creativecommons.org

Rebecka: I would be referring to your list and searching online, but ensuring to look at copyright issues.

David McHugh:Find them. Wikimedia Commons is great, there are other options easily findable here https://search.creativecommons.org/

Stanley Strauss:This Chat will be saved and available on the archived webinar page.

Eileen O'Shea:Slides and that handout can be downloaded here: https://infopeople.org/civicrm/event/info?reset=1&id=533

Maria Sunio (RCLS):Free account on Canva.com offers many shapes, text, and clip art that could be combined to make badges. Templates don't include badges (yet), but you can set your own custom dimensions.

Melissa:Planning to give these for Webjunction's tech comps

Melissa:I wish Webjunction would create some badges

Karisa Tashjian:Is there a list of badges that are already available from organizations?

Melissa:Wow! This is awesome to upload a CSV

Brianna:www.freepik.com, www.vectorart.org

Melissa:Thank you

Melissa:Webjunction's tech comps

Patrick Milas:We use competencies in Florida.

Shana:We developed some in-house for our library system.

Maria Sunio (RCLS):Webjunction for one.

Larry Britt:digital literacy (Northstar)

Patrick Milas:Florida uses WebJunction's competencies.

Laura:We have in-house standards
